Fourth Sunday in Advent

As we come to the last week of Advent our thoughts turn, inevitably, to the coming feast of Christmas but the church, in its wisdom, has one more week of preparation before the event. The attention now falls on the human family which is going to be affected by the coming birth, a young family, thrown into uproar by the unexpected events, and struggling to come to terms with what is happening to them.

Isaiah speaks of a sign of God's relationship with His people. He speaks of the patience of God, beset by the cries of a people, living in hope yet impatient for a sign that will show them the extent of God's love for them. Perhaps they were hoping for a message of glory and power, an intervention in their lives that would raise them above all other nations, but instead God's promise is the opposite of their hopes, He promises a child, born of a maiden, a son who is to be called Emmanuel, a sign that God is with us.

Paul was a great believe in people, throughout his ministry he calls on a great number of individuals, male and female, to join him in proclaiming the Good News of Christ. Today we have the beginning of perhaps his greatest epistle, the Letter to the Romans; the stage now moves to the centre of the first century world, to Rome, and the diversity of cultures and beliefs that exist in the city. There are many Christian converts in Rome, drawn from places throughout the empire, divided by their nationality and language but united in their faith in Christ. Paul seeks to unite the people of God so that they can be a sign to the pagans that the love of God is for all people. He calls on them to be saints, united with him in service to God the Father and His Son Jesus Christ.

Matthew's account of the happenings to the families of Mary and Joseph is centered on Joseph, a man of honour, who wants to do what is best in a very awkward situation. He is in a dilemma, he cannot understand what is happening to his beloved Mary, he seeks a way that will do least harm. We know very little about Joseph, but from the scraps of information in the gospels, we can be assured that he was a very devout man, well versed in scripture, ready to do God's will. He sleeps, and, in his dreams, he is visited by an angel of God. This encounter assures him that all that Mary and the scriptures say has come to pass, Mary will have a son, and he will be called Jesus, for he comes, to save his people. David Frank

Vocations to the Priesthood

It is important to persist in our prayers for Vocations to the Priesthood. If the Church continues to pray for vocations to the priesthood our candidates will gain the grace they need to answer the call to the priesthood. [Jesus prays to the Father for his disciples:] "I passed your word on to them, and the world hated them, because they belong to the world no more than I belong to the world. I am not asking you to remove them from the world, but to protect them from the Evil One. They do not belong to the world any more than I belong to the world. Consecrate them in the truth; your word is truth. As you sent me into the world, I have sent them into the world, and for their sake I consecrate myself so that they too may be consecrated in truth. I pray not only for these but also for those who through their teaching will come to believe in me." John 17:14-19

Welcome to Carmine Rea - a student for the priesthood studying at St Mary's Oscott

When we are discerning and studying at seminary, seminarians always stay in parishes for a few weeks every year to get used to parish life. I remember many good placements during my six years of seminary. It started off with a cold January in the East End of London working in a homeless shelter but then the rest of the placements were dotted around different parishes in our Diocese, all of which were good experiences.

I am delighted to say Carmine, who is in his second year of seminary formation, will be staying with us for three weeks in January, I am sure we will make him very welcome in the Parish and keep him in our prayers. Fr Alf

Nb: - On the evening of Friday February 10th we have been asked to host an evening Mass praying for Vocations- all are welcome.
